CONTRACT FOR CONSTRUCTION CITY STREETS GIVEN TO KNOXVILLE COMPANY LAST NIGHT

Humbard Makes More Satisfactory Bid Than Rennebaum—His Specifications Unanimously Adopted By Council

ALL WORK MUST BE DONE BY SPECIFICATIONS MADE

The contract for the construction and reconstruction of city streets was awarded to the Humbard Construction company of Knoxville at the city council meeting last night. A special meeting of the city council was called for 7 o'clock Thursday evening by Mayor J H. Keeney for the purpose of preparing the contract.

The bid submitted by A. H. Rennebaum was incomplete in that it failed to specify a price for excavation; in other respects it was higher in all essential items than that made by Humbard. A certified check for $3000 was enclosed with the Humbard bid. The itemized bid of the Humbard Construction company follows:

Excavation, $1.00 per cubic yard; embankment, .65 per cubic yard: overhaul over 3000 feet, .25 per cubic yard; combined curbing and guttering, $1.30 per lineal foot; twelve inch curbing, .65 per lineal foot; eighteen inch gutter, .65 per lineal foot; resetting old curb, .40 per lineal foot; ten foot gutter, $2 80 per square yard; reenforced concrete pavement stone coarse aggregating one-two-three, $3.20 per square yard; Kentucky asphalt and six inch concrete base slag coarse aggregating one-three-six, $2.85 per square yard; Kentucky rock asphalt or reconstructed macadam base, $2 45 per square yard; Kentucky rock asphalt surface on bridge, $1.50 per sugare yard. The price of $2.85 for the six inch concrete base with coarse slag was based on the presumption that slag can be obtained at the furnace; otherwise the price of this item of construction will be $3.06, the bid specified.

Rennebaum's Specifications

A. H. Rennebaum's bid for the street construction follows:

Curbing guttering combined, $1:50 per lineal foot; 12-inch curb and gutter combined, $1 00 per lineal foot; reinforced concrete, $3.45 per square yard; concrete base and rock asphalt, $3.00 per square yard; macadam base new work, $2.80 per square yard.

The City is to furnish furnace slag free of cost at the furnace. Any other work is to be at cost, plus 10 per cent.

If the gathering of the slag which is to be furnished free by the City, gets beyond reasonable cost of handling and it is necessary to use other rock, the cost of same shall be added to above bid prices.

J. C. Richardson, city engineer and his assistant, C. F. Otey, carefully checked over the figures of the two bids and then turned them over to M. G. Hubbard, chairman of the street committee, who recommended that Humbard be given the contract. The twelve councilmen unanimously voted to award the contract to Humbard.

John Howard, representing a number of property holders, said that on streets where the traffic is not heavy a lighter type of street should be constructed. The mayor said that property holders could choose the different types of construction set forth in the specifications as long as entire blocks were made with uniformity. Dr. U. G. Brummett said that two blocks on Twenty-fourth street now have a fairly good concrete surface and that the property owners of the section preferred that this base should not be torn out, that it would be expensive and unnecessary. The mayor said that all the work would have to be done according to the specifications.

Further Paving Contemplated

A recommendation that Lynwood road from Englewood road to Twenty-fifth street, Nineteenth street from Cumberland avenue to Lothbury avenue, Eighteenth street from Cumberland avenue to Lothbury avenue and Eighteenth street around the L. and N. passenger station be considered for improvement was read. It stated that ample notice would be given before it was brought before the council meeting. No action was taken on it.

The ordinance providing that all streets running parallel with Cumberland avenue except Exeter avenuew which shall hereafter be constructed shall be forty feet in width passed the second reading and became a city law.

A bill for the hauling of 151 loads of slag at $1.00 each was read and ordered paid. The resignation of Reese Watkins, night policeman, was read and accepted by the council. Mayor Keeney thanked him for his splendid work during his eighteen months of service. A request for a permit to built a concrete and frame warehouse 90 by 140 feet was made by the City Lumber company and was granted by the council.

Presents School Expenses

A communication from Dr. C. K. Brosheer, chairman of the educational board, called attention to the statute which provides that it shall be the duty of the commissioners or general council to levy taxes sufficient to pay interest and create a sinking fund for the payment of bonds at maturity. The board, it stated, passed resolutions providing the sum to be levied annually as follows: For annual interest on $150,000 at 5 1-2 per cent, $8,250; sinking funds for the purpose of retiring bonds at maturity, thirty years, $5,000, making a total of $13,250.

The expense for maintaining and operating the Middlesboro public schools from July 1, 1923 to June 30, 1924, as submitted by the board, follows:

Superintendent, secretary, clerk of board and truant officer, $6,375; elementary teachers and principals, white, $36,940; colored, $4,780; high school, $15,960; substitutes, $1,000; janitors, seven schools, $4,080; fuel, light, water and telephone, $5,000; insurance, $2,000 census, $150; repairs and upkeep, $1,000; interest, $240; supplies, $4,000; incidentals, $1,000; total, $82525.

The deficit carried over from 1921-22-23 was $9,500, making the total of $92,025. Deducting the $22,400 received from the state and $1,000 for tuition, the actual amount needed by the city is $68,625. It was stated that a tax assessment of $6,862,500 would be necessary to provide this amount of revenue.

Mayor Keeney informed the council that the city assessment was more than a million dollars short of this figure but that the board of equalization had not yet finished their report. The report of the educational was formally accepted by the council. Action on the question of obtaining school revenue will not be taken up until after the recent assessment has been checked up.

Former Missouri Governor to Be Buried In Brownsville, Tenn., His Birhtplace, Thursday

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Funeral of Joseph Wingate Folk, formerly governor of Missouri, who died here yesterday at his sister's will be held Thursday at his birthplace, Brownsville, Tenn. Mrs Folk will accompany the body there tonight.

ST. LOUIS, May 29.—Joseph Wingate Folk stepped from an obscure prosecutor to national prominence almost overnight by his prosecution of the "boodlers" here in 1900.

Eight legislators were convicted by Folk and eight by his successor, and the remaining went free for turning state's evidence.

The two company directors were not convicted. One beat the case and the other was in Paris outside the court's jurisdication.

Shortly after he uncovered the street railway scandal Folk brought to light a $47,500 boodle deal in which 19 city legislators were alleged to have taken a bribe in connection with a street lighting bill. The alleged briber in this case was indicted but not convicted.

In 1904 Folk was elected governor. To get the nomination he defeated J. A. Reed, now a United States senator and Harry B. Hawes, now a congressman. Folk was the only democrat elected on the state ticket.

The Sunday blue law was never enforced here until Folk became governor. He also caused the repeal of the Breeders law, which put a stop to horse racing in Missouri.

As chief counsel for the interstate commerce commission in 1914, Mr. Folk conducted the six months' investigation of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad here which resulted in sensational disclosures.

A THOUGHT

Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual, restore such an one in the spirit of meekness; considering thyself lest thou also be tempted.—Gal. 6:1.

LIFE, that ever needs forgiveness, has for its first duty to forgive.—Lytton.

HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATES

Twenty-two pupils of Middlesboro, armed with high school diplomas, are going forth into the world, either to begin life's battle with the knowledge already acquired to enter institutions of higher learning to delve deeper into the subjects with which they are now partially familiar.

During the four years of high school work the student is taught to think. If he has learned to do this in a logical and organized manner he has attained that for which the institution is intended. If the principles of coordinate mental discipline have become inculcated to such a degree that the graduate can tackle life's problems and solve them with thoroughness and accuracy, then he can attain whatever success in life his mind, urged on by ambition, desires.

If he has not learned these basic principles of education it is not likely that they will be mysteriously added to his mental attainments after he has entered college. All such institutions are able to develop talent; none of them can supply it.

The graduate should not be disappointed if his diploma fails to be an "open sesame" to all the good things of life. While it frequently gives the possessor an opportunity that he would otherwise not obtain, it will in no sense insure the permanency of a position; employers demand a certain quality and quanity of work regardless of alleged previous scholastic attainments.

Since our success in life depends almost entirely on our fitness and ability to handle affairs those who can afford it should get a higher education. The very fact that a boy or girl desires to go to college or a school for special training is, in most cases, evidence that they have the ability to receive a high degree of learning. If they do not wish to pursue the subjects further the nominal satisfaction of holding a college diploma is about all they will get out of it.

PARDONING POWER

Announcement has been made from Frankfort that Governor Morrow has pardoned Tom Slaughter, a Christian county negro, sentenced to death in 1912 in two separate trials, but whose sentence was commuted to life imprisonment by the then Governor McCreary. The crime was, according to the evidence brought out in the trial, a most atrocious one, and only the cool courage of the officers prevented a mob from taking the case into the court of Judge Lynch.

Perhaps, says the Owensboro Messenger in discussing this, it was because there was a feeling that, being a negro, and killing a white man, the jury rendered a more severe verdict than if the case were reversed, which actuated Governor McCreary in granting the convict a chance for his life. Naturally the inference was that he was to remain in the penitentiary for the rest of his natural life. Now, having served only a little longer term than a chicken thief would have received, he is turned loose by an indulgent executive, the Messenger continues.

The particular case itself has nothing to wo with the principle involved, says this newspaper, which observes that Tom Slaughter may never do any more harm in his own proper person. The Messenger says, however: "The bad influence will be on the criminal mind. So long the judgments of the courts, just so long will the criminally inclined take a chance. Only when a life sentence means 'from now on' will the fear of the law be firmly rooted in the consciousness of the mind inclined to violate the laws of the land."

Certainly in Kentucky justice is tempered with mercy.—Lexington Herald.

Kinks o' the Links
by "Pro"

If your opponent drives his ball into long grass and while you are assisting him in hunting for the ball by brushing the grass aside, is there any penalty if you touch or move your opponent's ball while so doing?

In looking for a ball that has been lost in long grass, it is customary to push aside only so much of the grass that will enable the player to find the ball, yet in no way improve the lie. If looking for your opponent's ball you touch or move it, you are not subject to the usual penalty of the loss of the hole. When you move the ball of your opponent under such circumstances, he must replace it as near as possible in its original position.

Berton Braley's Daily Poem
HAVE PATIENCE
By Berton Braley

MOONSHINE is plenty, no doubt;
Yes, you can get it, that's true.
Just seek a bootlegger out,
He'll sell his poison to you.
Still, booze is passing away,
Though there is many a leak;
Rum wasn't built in a day,
Rum can't be smashed in a week.

HOOCH has held man in its thrall,
Age after age, it appears;
We can't get rid of it all
Just in a couple of years!
There's bound to be some delay
Getting the dryness we seek,
Rum wasn't built in a day,
Rum can't be smashed in a week.

TAKING their drinks from the mob
Isn't a cinch, you can bet;
It is a wearisome job.
Drying a land that was wet:
Still, we are winning the fray,
Beating the bootlegging clique;
Rum wasn't built in a day,
Rum can't be smashed in a week.

Do you know Baseball?
by Billy Evans

ONE—If it is discovered that the batter is the wrong hitter, the count being two strikes and two balls at the same time, can he be removed and the proper batter substituted?

TWO—With runner on third and two out, batter strikes out, ball gets away from catcher, runner on third scoring, batsman reaching second. Batsman fails to touch first and is called out, retiring side. Does run count?

THREE—Batsman steps out of box, having received umpire's permission to do so. As he steps back into the box and still is in motion not having taken his position, pitcher delivers ball. Has he such a right?

FOUR—Ball strikes in four territory and goes down third base line about a foot foul all the way. Then is strikes something as it nears the bag, bounds in and comes into contact with bag. Is it fair or foul?

FIVE—Batter tries to dodge wildly pitched ball. It strikes his gat and results in a grounder to pitcher who throws batter out at first. Can that be done?

Answers

ONE—Manager has perfect right to substitute proper batter who takes the count of two strikes and two balls.

TWO—Run does not count as batter scores on a play in which the third out is a play on which the batsman fails to reach first.

THREE—Umpire should not permit the ball to be delivered, until the batter had actually taken his proper position in the box. He should regard the pitch as nothing in such a situation.

FOUR—It is a fair ball when it strikes the bag, regardless of the fact that it was foul all the way down the line.

FIVE—Ball is in play in such a happening and fielder had the right to retire batsman at first.

AN INTIMATE STORY OF INNERMOST EMOTIONS REVEALED IN PRIVATE LETTERS
COPYRIGHT 1925 - NEA SERVICE INC

LETTER FROM JOHN ALDEN PRESCOTT TO HIS FRIEND, SYDNEY CARTON

DEAR SYD:

I am pounding out this letter to you on the old machine we both abused in college when we had great ideas of besting the business game in a month or two after leaving the more or less secluded campus for the wide, wild world.

"Them was the happy days!"

I sometimes think, Syd, that the irresponsibility and freedom from care that cost college men have prepares them for anything else but the humdrum life and responsibility of a real business man.

And then if a man adds to a growing business curriculum a wife, the dickens is to pay.

Don't misunderstand me, Syd. Leslie is the sweeetest, dearest, loveliest girl in all the world and I am still, yet and always in love with her. But when you and I had spent our last cent in the old days we managed to go without for 24 hours by getting invited somewhere or holding up a friend until we heard from home. If it was not forthcoming then, we hied ourselves to our uncle, whose family crest is the three gold balls, and borrowed of him, leaving as a token of good will our best dinner suit if necessary.

When a man is married, that sort of thing can't be done. A man marries both respectability and conventionality when he marries a wife.

I begin about the fifteenth of the month to shudder when I think of the first of the next month with its bills. Syd, I didn't know it cost so much for two people to live. And you can't shunt them off by telling them you will pay them somewhere in the middle of next week or next month or next year because you have got to keep on buying groceries; you have got to keep on paying rent; the gas man, the telephone, the water and the lectric light people will shut off your supplies if you don't pay them

It's a fright, Syd.

Again don't think I blame Leslie. She has been a brick and I know she has worked harder than she ever did in her life. Besides, it must come very hard for her.

She is doing her own work, you know, and I don't believe she ever washed a dish in her life until she moved into the apartment. You just ought to see how spick and span she keeps it.

When the bills come in, however, and I don't know how I am going to pay them, I am just as irritable and cross as I can be. Everything looks hateful to me for I can only see the money it costs.

Day before yesterday afternoon I got into an innocent little poker game and when it was time for me to go home to dinner I was six hundred dollars in the hole. I would have thought nothing of that in the old days but I'm married now.

I telephoned Leslie that business was keeping he down and I told the truth, Syd, for I did want to win some of my money back. Instead, when it came 10 o'clock and I had to leave because I knew Leslie was worrying, I found that I owed eight hundred and fifty dollars.

Of course you know, before you had gotten this far, what I am writing this letter for. Have you got any money Syd? If you have will you lend it to me? I've got to make a payment on some stock in the concern if I would hold it. Come across, old chap, if you can. I am in desperate straits.

JACK.

NATURE

As a fond mother, when the day is o'er,
Leads by the hand her little child to bed,
Half willing, half reluctant to be led,
And leave his broken playthings on the floor,
Still gazing at them through the open door,
Not wholly reassured and comforted
By promises of others in their stead,
Which, though more splendid, may not please him more;
So Nature deals with us, and takes away
Our playthings one by one, and by the hand
Leads us to rest so gently that we go
Scarce knowing if we wish to go or stay,
Being too full of sleep to understand
How far the unknown transcends the what we know.

Political Pepper! Pennsy To Season Convention Well

WASHINGTON, May 24—Rock-ribbed Pennsylvania, the good old Gibraltar of the G. O. P., is the first state off the reservation in the movement for renomination and re-election of Warren G. Harding as president.

At a conference of the Pennsylvania members of Congress ,held in Atlantic City, decision was reached to support the selection of an uninstructed delegation to the 1924 Republican convention.

This, in the face of diplomatic suggestions from Harding henchmen that it would be timely and significant—also helpful—if the Keystone state senators a delegation pledged to support Harding for a second term.

Back of the decision reached lies a double motive. The first and most moving one is of revenge

They Are Peeved

Harding has disregarded many of the pet recommendations of the Pennsylvania boys in placing patronage

And considering the fact that Pennsylvania felt it nominated Harding, and therefore should have had fat pickings, the yfeel they have been "done dirt."

Next to the desire to register a dig at Harding, the Pennsylvanians' action was due to their desire to boost early and late for a favorite son candidate of their own—Senator George Wharton Pepper.

In view of this situation. Pepper played. to all appearances, a passive part in the Atlantic City conclave. Senator Reed, who is particularly sore at Harding over patronage refusals, led the hymn of hate.

May Be Serous

This Pennsylvania situation bids fair to be a really serious obstacle in the way of a harmonious renomination for Harding. If the Congressional delegation, controlling as they do in most cases the local organization machinery, can put across their ticket of uninstructed delegates, that sets over into the debit column—either ofr purposes of trading or of active opposition— a block of 86 votes which is no small handicap.

On the other hand ,there seems some likelihood that the Congressional crowd, presuming to assume direction of Pennsylvania's presidential program may be brought up with a bump by the Pinchot progressive group within the state, which while not defining its position with respect to Harding does not look kindly on the kindling of a presidential Pepper pot.

POLICE FORCE BOSSED AY WOMEN! TOWN ACQUIRES PETTICOAT COUNCIL

AND HERE WE HAVE THE PETTICOAT GOVERNMENT OF THEBES GROUPED ABOUT THE NEW MARSHALL, OSCAR GARRETT.

THEBES, Ill, May 28—The police force of this little town is a happy man just now. Oscar Garrett is his name. Didn't a "bunch of women," as he puts it, choose him? Yep! And won't things hum during the present petticoat regime? You said it, brother! er!

Thebes recently underwent a political eruption. In the last election the Citizens' ticket, composed of women with one exception, was pitted against the Peoples' ticket composed of men. The women won, and from mayor down, went into office.

Mrs. Nora H. Gammon, mayor called a meeting and the important subject of a police force arose. Three holdover men trustees still were in office. One of them quit cold, saying he wouldn't have anythig to do with petticoat government. Another failed to show up, and so with the women sticking together, Garrett was chosen 3 to 1, as town marshall.

Proud of Honor

"I'm proud to be chosen by women," he spoke gracefully," and I'm afraid to be bossed by them. I doubt if there is another bunch of women in the country that have the ability these women here in Thebes have. Of course, there is quite a task ahead of us in cleaning up the town. But I am sure that they will establish a precedent for the rest of the country."

One cherished theory that women placed in political control would lose their sense of humor has already been blasted higher than Pike's Peak.

With narv a chuckle they filled the Fire Department Committe with men. Now this in itself doesn't show a sense of the ridiculous until it is known that the Thebes Fire Department simply "ain't." It's just a case of everybody grabbing a bucket and throwing all the water he can.

Oscar's main concern, he has been impressed by his femine bosses, is in cleaning the town, morally and physically.

Just Like Shelby

"I took this job with a view of cleaning out the moonshine element here," he says. And when he gets through he adds, Thebes is going to be as dry as the grapefruit you buy in an armchair lunch room

Like the women in control, the marshal rejoices at the result of the election if only because of its publicity at Shelby, Mont., where the Dempsey-value to the town. It works just like a prize fight, it was explained. Look at Shelby, Mont., where the Dempsey-Gibbons championship match is to be held. Who ever heard of Shelby before? And who ever heard of Thebes before now?

WAGGING TONGUES PUT TWO IN JAIL

NEWARK, N. J., May 24.—Wagging tongues and back-fence gossip have put a young man and his wife behind the bars of the county jail charged with the murder of the woman's brother.

And this whispering has led the police to open the graves of the man's parents to determine whether they, too, died of poisoning.

Back of it all is another tragedy of Main Street—a Main Street of this large eastern city where one rarely knows the person living next door, and there is supposed to be no time for idle wagging.

MRS MARY CREIGHTON, the 24-year-old wife, lies in the city hospital. She gave birth to her second child a few days after she was arrested.

"How can a mother that brings life into the world," she says, "think of taking life! It's too absurd for word."

Yet the tongues keep wagging.

THEY tell about Charles Raymond Avery, 18-year-old brother of Mrs. Creighton, who died in her home on April 20.

They tell of the boy's last illness, and the rumors that flew about. And of anonymous letters which were sent to the prosecutor's office, which urged the authorities to make an investigation into the youth's death.

"We investigated," says John O. Bigelow, prosecutor of Essex county, "and we found the boy died, not of natural causes, but of arsenic poisoning."

Witnesses appeared before the grand jury: an indictment was quickly handed down, and Mrs. Creighton and her husband were apprehended

TONGUES kept on wagging

They recalled the death of Creighton's mother Dec. 1 1920—of a cerebral hemorrhage according to the death of Creighton's father in September 1921, of heart trouble.

These rumors led the prosecutor to obtain a court order to exhume the bodies.

"In neither case was there evidence of any organic trouble," says Dr. George L. Warren, county physician. "In the stomach of Mrs. Creighton was found a white powdery substance."

This prompted the authorities to continue their investigations.

WHILE his wife is in the hospital, nursing her baby, John Creighton paces his cell, worried more by the thought of his wife's condition and the care of his other 3-year-old child than by the charge against him.

"It will all come out right," he says. "But it's an awful strain being charged with such a crime when we know we are innocent."

JOHN CREIGHTON, FORMER NAVY "GOB," WHO, TOGETHER WITH HIS WIFE IS CHARGED WITH THE MURDER OF HER YOUNGER BROTHER BELOW: PROSECUTOR JOHN O. BIGLOW, WHO SAYS MORE THAN 30 PER CENT OF MURDER CASES DEVELOP FROM FAMILY QUARRELS.

FINDS FAMILY CRIME FREQUENT

NEWARK, N. J., May 24.—"Hate breaks family ties almost as often as love holds them together," says John O. Bigelow, county prosecutor who is investigating the Creighan case

"It is surprising how often crime occurs within a family group. More than one-third of the murder cases that come to the prosecutor's office are of the family type.

"Perhaps the reason is that members of a family are thrown so closely together. Often when they don't get along well, irritation leads to antagonism—and worse."

MUTE MOLDS BUST OF HARDING

EUGENE E HANNAN

By Harry B. Hunt

WASHINGTON, May 26—Eugene E. Hannan, deaf and dumb sculptor of Washington, again has scored, being one of the prize-winners among 50 contestants submitting designs for medals to be awarded victors in water sports to be staged here during the Shriner's convention in June

Although unable either to speak or hear, Hannan perfected himself in his art by study both in Paris and Mardid He found life much simpler there, he said in a pencil-and-peaper conversation—as he could converse with the average Latin by gestures.

Hannan's bust of President Harding, as a noble of the Mystic Shrine, is declared by those who have seen it to be one of the best likenesses of the chief executive any artist has executed.

Miniatures of Harding in a tasseled red fez, and of Uncle Sam, decked out in full Shriner regalia, as host to the convention, are expected to be amoung the most popular souvenirs for visiting Shriners to carry back home with them

ROAD MATERIAL SURVEY TO BE MADE BY GEOLOGISTS

By Associated Press.

FRANKFORT, Ky., May 29—Next month Dr Charles H Richardson, professor of mineralogy at Syracuse University, New York, will begin a survey of road building materials found in Kentucky The investigation will be made by the Kentucky Geological Survey and the Department of State Roads and Highways

Dr Richardson is better equipped perhaps, than any other man available, according to Dr W R Jillson, director of the geological survey He has spent two summers in Kentucky, the first on an investigation of glass sand and the second making a study of building stones Dr Richardson has for a number of years been closely associated with the building stones industry in the New England States Twenty-eight years of experience in geology are accredited to him

The scope of the report has not been exactly determined but it is believed that the gravels of Western Kentucky, limestone of Central Kentucky and the sandstones of Eastern and Western Kentucky will all receive due attention. A tabulation of this kind will not only benfit the State Highy Commission, but will very materially assist the county officials in the choice of local material to be used in construction of county roads, according to Mr Jillson.

It is probable that the report will be out in book form about the first of 1924

Nothing beats an old-fashioned thunderstorm for finding things lost under the bed

SALES OF MONUMENTS INCREASES NEAR DECORATION DAY

Sales of monuments have increased recently owing to the approach of Decoration Day, according to S. Owsley, local dealer. Six were sold yesterday. George R. Needham of Knoxville was here yesterday to make inscriptions on a number of stones.

No plans have been made by local fraternal organizations for the decoration of graves on May 30, so far as is known, this having been deferred until Sunday, June 3. The Red Men and possibly other fraternities will decorate the graves of the dead on that day.

PRUNING TOMATOES

In actual dimes and dollars the tomato counts for more in the course of a season than any vegetable grown. Save the tomatoes and you save the dimes. There is one way to save the crop and get the most out of it and that is by growing them trained to stakes. Tomatoes, like their cousin the eggplant and peppers, need all the heat there is to ripen their fruits and the less shade they have the better will be the prospects of a crop Getting them up off the ground gets them into the sun and prevents a tangled mass of vines from shading the fruit and delaying its ripening. They will not produce a full crop when shaded or crowde.

Another reason, particularly in the small garden, in addition to more tomatoes and better quality is economy of space Left to sprawl over the ground tomatoes take up a lot of room and are impossible of cultivation. Besides, a good percentage of the fruit on the ground will rot, particularly if it happens to be a wet season A minimum of rot is secured by the method of training to stakes.

The time to start is now while the plants are young and consists of only a single sturdy stem. This will not remain for long for branches will start from the axil of every leaf and if left to itself the plant will soon be a tangle of stems and foliage. A plant allowed to sprawl over the ground needs about four fett of room. It is an easy matter to grow four plants in this same space, training upright to stakes.

Get stakes six feet long if possible, allowing a foot to be in the ground They should be set in place before the tomatoes, but if this is impossible, may be placed after the plants are set out, care being taken not to injure the tomato As soon as the plant begins to send out side branches, which will be very apparent, pinch out all but the main stem and two side branches The stems should be tied to the stake with strips of cloth, as string is likely to cut them if they are hit by high wind. They will need fequent tying as the season progresses and the extra side shoots of which there will be plenty should be kept pinched out, allowing only the blossom clusters from the axils of the leaves to develop.

The plant will render the height of the pole—five feet—by July. Then the tips should be pinched out to throw the strength of the plant into the development of the fruit. Care must be taken to keep the branches which will grow rapidly and thickly pinched out. A trained tomato will need to be looked over and tied at least once a week to keep it in shape.

Variants of the single stake method are often found more convenient in the shape of trellises In this case a wire stretched midway of the poles may be used to train the side branches, but care must be taken to eliminate the numerous side branches that will keep springing from the axils of the leaves.

COOPERATION AIDS WORK BIG PLANTS

Executive Of 16 Big Companies Express This Sentiment At Meeting

By Associated Press.

Cleveland, May 29—Sincerity of purpose, frankness and a desire for right labor relations are the basis if successful employe representation, according to the executives of 10 large manufacturing concerns here, all of which have in operation well developed systems of workers' committees with a voice in the affairs of the company.

In a survey of the operation of the plans in these establishments, each of which employs more than 200 workmen, made by a committee from the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce, is is set forth that while in some instances the plans are intended to promote departmental co-operation, or reduce labor turnover, in most cases a desire to improve relations between employer and employe is the fundamental reason for their installation.

The executives, as a rule, contend that a mutual spirit of co-operation must be present before this bases of successful representation can be made actual.

Other outstanding features of the executive's opinion as reported by the committee, were:—

"Advisability of educating emplayes as thoroughly as possible regarding sound economics in order that they may be assisted to consider labor relations from a sound view-point.

"Representatives of employes should be selected by and from their own number and should be assured by their employer that no discrimination will be made agaist them because of anything said or done in their representative capacity.

There should be no limitations preventing employe representatives from consireding and formulating recommendations rearding any phase of the company's activities concerning housing, wages, and all other matters properly affecting their relationship."

The report stated that in most instances in the 16 companies included in the survey, the companies do not attempt to restrict the subject which employe committees may discuss with the management, eleven plants permitting unrestricted discussion and five providing for considerations of any subject affecting employment conditions.

Except in one of the plants, there is no provision for the arbitration of differences between employes and the management. The commitee did not find any instance where there had ever been a request by the employes for outside arbitration.

In all the plans the committee found that where employe recommendations have been disapproved, a full explanation was given.

In eleven instances it was claimed that the employe representation had improved the morals of the organization. Seven executives noted decreased labor turnover. In six cases the executives concluded the plans developed a more intelligent cooperation on the part of employes while in several plants the results were stated to have increased efficiency and production; the development of intelligent leaders among employes; the promotion of the employes' economic education, and the production of suggestions reducing costs and improving conditions.

TOLICEMAN ARRESTS "SPOOK" AT SEANCE

AN ARTIST'S CONCEPTION OF THE "SEANCE" BROKEN UP BY POLICE IN COVINGTON, KY.

CINCINNATI, O., May 26—This vicinity either is on the verge of a spiritist revelation, or about to be entertained to some rich humor.

And all because police and other investigators are determined to rid the community of so-called fake mediums, who prey upon the gullible.

Recently a seance in Covington, Ky., a city across the Ohio River, was rudely broken up when a policeman in the "circle" gathered in his arms the supposed spirit of his grandmother.

And upon the heels of this episode, came another alleged expose in which a "trumpet seance" came to grief when a doubter flashed a light. Now believers in the occult are determined to produce psychic phenomena to offset unfavorable publicity.

The Covington case has aroused considerable attention.

Police Present

Twenty-nine persons including police newspaper men attended the matrialization seance held by Mrs. Mary Langley, who was unaware that any law save that of the other world was present.

The usual songs were sung, and then through the dimness of a very dark room, a curtain of a cabinet opened. Squeak! A white form began to flit about. Horrors!

"It's Rosebud," whispered one of the old-timers. Rosebud, it was explained, was the supposed daughter of "Uncle Jim" Alton, who has assisted Mrs. Langley for a year and a half.

"Evening, Rosie," called a regular.

"How's everybody?" asked the spook cheerily.

Rosie then asked a series of questions to a man wearing a lodge pin She also told an elderly man from Louisville to play a horse named Pumps at Churchhill Downs.

"We know what horse will win," piped Rosebud, "cause we go to the jockey shed." (Pumps ran five days later, finished second and paid $4).

She then scolded Uncle Jim because he hadn't brought candy, but accepted a piece of chewing gum as a substitute Then she grew playful, and sang "I'm Forever Washing Dirty Dishes," a parody on a well known song.

Patrolman Herman Ricken's turn came next, and who should appear but the spirit of his grandmother!

"Howdy, Grandma!"

"Well, Grandmother," Ricken said, and being of an affectionate bent of mind, he embraced her. At the word "Well" a reporter flashed a light, and oh boy!

The spook wriggled away and dived unceremoniously under a table, and when the smoke blew over, Mrs Langley and Alton were under arrest for disorderly conduct. Alton later said he had been fooled, and that he believed he had been talking with departed dead.

Mrs. Charles B. Pressnall, trumpet medium, was taken into custody in this city after an investigator claimed to have exposed the voice coming from the trumpet as belonging to Mrs. Pressnall.

Through her attorney she has said she will not consent to a trumpet test in court.

"Such a test would not be conclusive," she explains. "Sir Oliver Lodge is a spirit believer and yet the same tests that convinced him have failed to move other scientists."

But Mrs. Langley will contest her case to a finish, she says.

"Ever since a child I have been psychic. The spirits would come to me and talk to me. This is all a frame-up.

"Gown Was Planted"

"The gown they say was found was planted. I never had anything like it (Officers say the "spirit" was wrapped in a white cloth, which they found). I was in a trance when the interruption took place, so I do not know what happened More than one medium has been paralyzed by such interruptions. I am ill now.

"But I have retained a lawyer and will prove I am sincere. I will give a test seance to prove to the satisfaction of the court I can materialize the spirits. They little knew that I am widely known medium and have worked in Cleveland, Kansas City, Mo., Kansas City, Kan., St. Louis, Indianapolis, Kankakee, Ill., and other cities.

"The two worlds can be connected It is natural law. This condition is brought about by good thoughts and good conditions. I have absolutely no fear of failure or conviction."
